

SANTA'S COOKIE

Once upon a time, in a snowy land so bright, Lived a jolly old man, with a beard snowy white. He traveled the world in just one special night, to bring gifts to children, so happy and bright.

As Santa Claus journeyed through the chilly air, He came to a house, where he saw a sweet pair. Two loving children, so kind and so fair, Left cookies for him, and carrots with care.

Santa ate up the cookies, so warm and so sweet, and enjoyed every bite, with a happy little eat. He then fed the carrots, to his trusty reindeer fleet, And apples too, so juicy and neat.

As Santa continued his ride, he thought with glee, Of the kindness and love, from those children so free. For their giving hearts, made his journey so easy, and he knew, he'd always remember this family.

So, to all the children, big and small, remember to be kind, and to share with all. For you never know, who might hear your call, and make their heart happy, by doing something so small.

Now Santa must leave, to continue his flight, to bring joy and happiness, throughout the night. Merry Christmas to all, and to all a goodnight, and remember to always be kind, and to shine your light.
